

Exercise Question 03

1. Explain why the consciousness is classified into 89 and 121 types although the consciousness (citta) has the single characteristic of awareness of object and classify the consciousnesses other than beautiful consciousnesses (asobhana citta) according to feeling (vedanā).
2. Identify the consciousnesses that most commonly arise in the sense-sphere realm (kāmvācara) and classify the sense-sphere consciousnesses (kāmvācara citta) according to type (jāti).
3. State which consciousness can arise when an ordinary person smiles and explain the nature of wholesome consciousness (kusala citta) and unwholesome consciousness (akusala citta).
4. Differentiate between the consciousness that arises in an ordinary person and an Arahant when performing an act of generosity (dāna) and mention the types of consciousness that may arise in you.

Question 1: Explain why the consciousness is classified into 89 and 121 types although the consciousness (citta) has the single characteristic of awareness of object and classify the consciousnesses other than beautiful consciousnesses (asobhana citta) according to feeling (vedanā).

- Part A: Classification of consciousness

Its single characteristic is awareness of object. All types of consciousness are the same according to the nature of being conscious of the object. But it can be classified into 89 or 121 through feeling (vedanā), association (sampayoga), promptitude (saṅkhāra), functions (kicca), type (jāti), plane (bhūmi), jhāna, object (ārammaṇa) and magga.

- Part B: Classification of other than Beautiful Consciousnesses (Asobhana Citta) by Feeling (Vedanā):

The 30 non-beautiful minds (12 Unwholesome + 18 Rootless) are broken down into:

- Sukha (Physical Pleasure): 1 Citta (Wholesome rootless body-consciousness).
- Dukkha (Physical Pain): 1 Citta (Unwholesome rootless body-consciousness).
- Somanassa (Mental Joy): 6 Cittas (4 Greed-rooted minds + 2 Rootless minds: Joyful Investigation and the Smiling consciousness).
- Domanassa (Mental Displeasure): 2 Cittas (The 2 Hatred-rooted minds).
- Upekkhā (Neutrality/Equanimity): 20 Cittas (6 Unwholesome minds [4 greed + 2 delusion] + 14 Rootless processing minds).

(Do I need to mention the Pāḷi name of those cittas, ex: sukhasahagataṃ kāyaviññānaṃ, ect ...) no need it is enough answer.

Question 2: Identify the consciousnesses that most commonly arise in the sense-sphere realm (kāṃāvacara) and classify the sense-sphere consciousnesses (kāṃāvacara citta) according to type (jāti).

• Part A: Identify the consciousnesses:

The consciousness mostly arises in the plane of sensual sphere (kāṃabhūmi) is called Kāṃāvacara citta, including 54 Cittas. It is first classified into three:

1. Akusala citta (Unwholesome consciousness): 12 Cittas
2. Ahetuka citta (Rootless consciousness): 18 Cittas
3. Kāṃāvacara sobhana citta (Sense sphere beautiful consciousness): 24 Cittas

• Part B: Classification by Nature (Jātibheda):

These 54 states are divided into four classes:

- Akusala (Unwholesome): 12 Cittas (8 Greed, 2 Hatred, 2 Delusion).
- Kusala (Wholesome): 8 Cittas (The Great Wholesome minds).
- Vipāka (Resultant): 23 Cittas (15 Rootless resultants + 8 Great resultants).
- Kriya (Functional): 11 Cittas (3 Rootless functionals + 8 Great functionals).

Question 3: State which consciousness can arise when an ordinary person smiles and explain the nature of wholesome consciousness (kusala citta) and unwholesome consciousness (akusala citta).

- Part A: Consciousness can arise when an ordinary person smiles:

For an ordinary person (puthujjana), a smile must be accompanied by mental pleasure/ joy (somanassa). It can manifest through 8 Cittas:

- 4 Unwholesome Greed-rooted Cittas, accompanied by joy (smiling from amusement, passion, or mundane delight).
- 4 Great Wholesome Cittas accompanied by joy (smiling out of genuine benevolence, devotion, or gratitude).
(Exception: 1 Rootless smiling consciousness - Hasituppāda and 4 Great Functional Cittas - Mahā Kiriya, belongs exclusively to Arahants and cannot arise in an ordinary person).

- Part B: Explain their nature:

- Kusala Citta (Wholesome):

The dhamma which cause contemptible evils to tremble, to shake, and to be destroyed.

(Kucchite pāpadhamme salayati calayati kampeti viddhamsetīti kusalam. Ku+sala)

It is motivated by non-greed, non-hatred and wisdom.

Its impact:

1. Aroga (mental healthy)
2. Anavajja (blameless)
3. Sukkhavipāka (productive of pleasant results).

- Akusala Citta (Unwholesome): The dhamma which is the contraditon of kusala (Na kusalam akusalam. Na+ kusala). It is motivated by greed, hatred and delusion.

Its impact:

1. Saroga (with mental disease)
2. Sāvajja (with fault)

3. Dukkhavipāka (bring about bad results).

(Can I just mention 1 of 4 definition of Kusala?) no need to write definition all and pāli, you write the meanings, impact and classification seeing the PPT Slide)

Question 4: Differentiate between the consciousness that arises in an ordinary person and an Arahant when performing an act of generosity (dāna) and mention the types of consciousness that may arise in you.

- Part A: Differentiate ordinary person vs. Arahant in Dāna:

- Ordinary Person: When giving, they act with one of the 8 Great Wholesome Consciousnesses (Mahā kusala). This generates new wholesome kamma seeds that will give future good results. (Add the reason like below)
- Arahant: When giving, they act with one of the 8 Great Functional Consciousnesses (Mahā kiriya). Because they have uprooted all roots of delusion (avijja and tanhā), their mind acts purely without planting any kamma seeds.

- Part B: Consciousness may arise in ordinary person

There are 45 Cittas that may arise in an ordinary person (puthujjana), classified to 4 types:

- Akusala (Unwholesome): 12 Cittas (8 Greed, 2 Hatred, 2 Delusion).
- Kusala (Wholesome): 8 Cittas (The Great Wholesome).
- Vipāka (Resultant): 23 Cittas (15 Rootless resultants + 8 Great resultants).
- Kriya (Functional): 2 Cittas (2 Rootless functionals: pañcadvāravajjana and manodvāravajjana citta)

(Exception: 9 cittas, including 1 Rootless smiling consciousness (Hasituppāda) and 8 Great Functional consciousness (Mahā kiriya cittas), which belong exclusively to Arahants and cannot arise in an ordinary person).
